

REY PILA 2010

HIGHLIGHTS + BACKGROUND

- Rey Pila is the brain child of Diego Solórzano, Los Dynamite's former frontman and composer.
- In 2006 Diego co-produced the critically acclaimed "Greatest Hits" with Los Dynamite, one the most important Mexican indie band of the past five years. An album that allowed them to play for 4 straight years throughout Mexico and the US sharing stages with The Killers, Interpol, Bloc Party and Soulwax. Peter Hook from New Order said "Los Dynamite's 'T.V.' what a great track, it sounds like Mark E. Smith on ecstasy!"
- After ending his cycle with Los Dynamite, Diego composed the body of work that would end up creating Rey Pila, the self-titled, solo album recorded last year at the New York studio of producer/engineer Paul Majahan (TV On The Radio, Yeah Yeah Yeahs, Liars, The National). Ranging from psychedelia to Detroit's old sound of Motown. Rey Pila holds 10 precious tracks (6 of them in English, 4 of them in Spanish) with huge choruses, squalling dissonance and sheets of twinkling electronic ambience all of them co-produced by Diego himself.

- Rey Pila's first single "No. 114" was released on March 22 and the support from radio stations in the country has been impressive being immediately added to national AAA radio and reaching #1 in Twitter Hype Machine Chart and #20 in the overall Popular Hype Machine charts. Supported by people like Gael García (actor) and Julieta Venegas (Musician)
- Rey Pila has been praised by the Mexican music media receiving massive support with features in Nylon, Vice and the most relevant music blogs.
- Rey Pila finished his latest video for "No Longer Fun" with Humble, the same production company that created Muse's astounding "Uprising" video.
